For our part, we consider the time was well chosen for a public expression of opinion on this subject of steam-heat meing, a practice which no one attempts seriously to defend. And the channel selected by the Shanghai Chamber for giving publicity to their views, to wit, a despatch addressed to the Chamber of Commerce at Hankow, was probably the only one open to this means of reaching the public ear, there not be ready to take the next mail. Consequentwas no assumittion—as some of the correspondents of Shanghai papers seem to inferthat the members of the Hankow Chamber were either specially responsible for the evi or specially influential for its cure. No one is deceived as to the true fons et origo mali, and the best recort on the Shanghai Chamber we have for such is that the culprits are its give members, nav, its own Committee. It is they who feed the fire of furious competition between steamers for the early delivery the Supreme Court aron a charge of a serious same cordiality from the rebels, the Annamite. of their Teas, and who, by paying the "dif- oriminal character. It appears that since that derential rates of freight," complained of, constitute themselves the true promoters of ocean racing if cock-fighting is immoral, it is not the rocks, but they who spur and pit them, who are to blame. But the representations of the Shanghai Chamber no more lose force from this circumstance, than the the Manchester/mildewers lost force because the writers and speakers pronounced their own condemnation, "Philip sober" is always held to be a trustworthy withess, "Queen's evidence" is perfectly good in law.

Eitlier from the impossibility of meeting the original argument of the Chamber of Commerce, or from a misappreliention of its whole The commission, or whatever the peculiar tridrift and meaning, the Shanghai critics have preferred to raise a variety of irrelevant issues, and to defend with research and ingenuity positions which were nowhere attacked. The remonstrance of the Chamber was clearly against. ran very powerful steamers on the China coast, for the purpose of conforing news in after an absence of eight months. We are advance of the mail steamers, without di- indebted to the courtesy of M. Millet, the saster; and that even the British government encourages speed in the convoyance of the mails. Now, as the animadversions of the warded to us at his request by M. de la Shanghai Chamber were not directed against Forest, acting French Consul:speed, but against racing, these replies appear to us to be wholly beside the question. The Messageries Maritimes steamers habitually run two knots an hour factor than the P. & O. boats, but nobody would assert that they are on that account loss safe. | Nor is there much analogy between the present system of neckand-nock racing between evenly-matched vessels, and the perfect command of the situation formerly enjoyed by the big houses, their private despatches to anticipate the slow coaches which carried the mails. The second kind of answer to the Chairman of the Shanghai Chamber, amounts to little more than a pardonable panegyric on the P. & O. Company. Mr. BARNES, the Agent at Shanghai, denies the applicability days. This time having expired, the Commisof the Chamber's strictures to their vessel, the sioner said that he had not at first thought of Venetia, because the regulations of the Comwould dispute the merits of the P. & O. Cap tains and Officers, but the argument from the Directors' regulations reminds us amusingly of a Spanish Consul, who proved a negative in favor of one of his tawny nationals, who was accused of stabbing, by quoting the rules of the ship to which he belonged, which forbade the men to carry knives! The caution of the P. & O. navigators is proverbia and indisputable—only, it does not touch the particular question under discussion. In our opinion, the distinction drawn by

Mr. Johnson between a sailing and steamer race, is a valid and proper distinction: Success in the one is the reward of skill and perseverance: in the other of mere hard driving, more than likely accompanied by recklessness. There is absolutely none but the most common-place skill called into play in the steam race-mechanical force in piling on coals being the chief factor the problem. For this reason, we never hear of steam-yacht-racing-it would be a sheer absurdity. If we want to know what steamboat racing really means, we must go to the American rivers, where the sport flourishes -or did do so-in full force. But there the idea of a race is uncomfortably associated with that of a nigger sifting on the safety valve, and of a grand transformation scene New York. .... Measure. S. M. On the 25th October last, the two French steamers Lacukai and Hoongking, together with a steam launch, left Hongkong, charged by the Tetai Mah, of the Province of Yunnan, to transport for him some inunitions of war, by going un the Hoongkinng, or Red River, which traverses the Province of Tonquin, with the object of opening up a new trade route with that Province. The expedition was headed by M. Dupuis, merchant of Hankow, assisted by M. Millet, merchant of Shanghai. On the 9th November they arrived at Tonquin, at the mouth of river hither to nuknown to Europeans, called the Concum. Here M. Dapuis had an interview with the Royal Commissioner, Li, formerly ambassador at Pekin for the King of Annani, and Minister of Foreign Affairs at Hué, who promised an answer from the King as to whether the expedition could proceed, within sixteen it, but the affair being very important it would pany enjoining cautions on the commanders, be necessary to wait several months-three at outweigh the temptation to rashness held out the least. Seeing clearly that this eimply meant by the differential rates of freight. Nobody complete evasion, the expedition, upon the pretext that the water was salt and the climate anbealthy where they were, expressed their intention of proceeding a little higher up the river and after some little parley did so. After going some distance up this river it was found to break off into four branches, one of which proved to be navigable, and, by means of it, the vessels made their way successfully to the Red. River, arriving in it on the 18th December. They followed the River to-Kecho, or Hannoi the capital of Tonquin, where they arrived on the 22nd December. On arriving there, it was found that there was not enough water to permit the steamers to proceed, and boats were in consequence borrowed of the natives, not, however, without some difficulty on account of opposition on the part of the Mandarins. After losing some time, in consequence of the bad disposition of the officials, M. Dupuis left Hannoi on the 18th January. In Tonquin two large rebellions were found to be raging-one the nearest to the capital, headed by a Chinese rebel chief named Kwang-tsong-yin; and that which is more to the north, extending to the last city of Tonquin, called Liaou-kai. commanded by another Chinese named Leaouyuen-foo. On arrival at the camp of the Annamites, the general sent his nide-de-camps to welcome him; and Mr. Dupuis continued his route and met with the rebels, who, however, proved friendly, and gave him the necessary men to pull his boats. The northern rebels were equally friendly.
